

Abstract

In a computer network system, a user-defined file modification request is communicated to a primary server, which communicates the request to a secondary server. The 5 file modification request is saved in a non-volatile storage media associated with the primary server, and the file modification request is executed and saved in a non-volatile storage media associated with the secondary server.